

Ethan was in his first year of school. One day he decided that he wanted his whole class to share his gingerbread cookies.

He said to his mother when he came home from school, "Mommy, can we ask Mr. Brown to bake gingerbread cookies for my whole class and for my teacher too?"

"Of course," said his mother.
"What a wonderful idea." His mother had taught Ethan from the time he was very young the importance of sharing. She was so

